The Comedian and her Caveman Larissa Vine 2020-06-23 Book three in the Women on Top series Laughter is the best aphrodisiac. Comedian Wren isn't laughing. Since her fiancé died three years ago, she's been struggling to keep things together and she's developed a debilitating phobia of water. When she's offered a job on a cruise ship, she takes it, hoping it will help cure her phobia and allow her to move on. Geologist Brett Fortescue knows a sweet deal when he sees one—take his mother on a cruise as part of her bucket list and give her a holiday to remember and, in return, his father will provide him with much-needed funding for his lab. It's a no-brainer. When Wren's and Brett's paths cross on the glitzy Serendipity, bound for Alaska, romance blossoms. But things aren't what they seem... Brett realizes that his mother's bucket-list tour is mired with hidden agendas and that he'll have to turn his plans upside down to make her holiday memorable. Wren discovers that if she wants to keep her job, she'll have to out-perform a rival entertainer. For her show to shine, she has to be funny. Problem is, she's not sure how anymore. Maybe Brett's the one who can teach her how to laugh and—more importantly—to love again?

North Carolina boasts a natural environment of exceptional richness and diversity. From the mountains to the coast, the state is home to an extraordinary variety of publicly accessible sites that showcase aspects of its ecology, geology, biology, and natural history. This book leads the reader on thirty-eight field trips to some of the most interesting and instructive of these natural landscapes. Written by leading naturalists from across the state, this collection of "eco-tours" includes excursions to each of its four major regions: the coast, the Coastal Plain, the Piedmont, and the mountains. Each trip traces a thirty- to seventy-mile driving route that connects preserved areas, hiking trails, scenic overlooks, nature trails, and other sites of interest. All entries provide a map of the route, describe what can be seen and learned along the way, and discuss especially noteworthy features. An essential resource for anyone who treasures North Carolina's natural heritage, this book will inspire and inform travelers throughout the Tar Heel state.

The Producer BDB: Birth of A Global Empire Erika Hirugami 2016-05-10 The Producer BDB Bryan Avila Is an emergent contemporary artist born in California and raised globally; primarily known for his depictions of pop-culture icons through street art. His renderings include Keith Haring, Jean-Michel Basquiat, Frida Kahlo, Andy Warhol, Salvador Dali and Pablo Picasso amongst many other contemporary culture producers to the extend of Karl Lagerfeld or Anna Wintour. His unique articulations amalgamate street culture with pop, fashion and a heavy doze of fine art. The Producer BDB's creations can be spotted around the globe in such cities as Paris in France, Madrid in Spain, Rio De Janerio in Brazil, Miami in the United States, Berlin in Germany and all over Los Angeles in California (even Delta's Sky Lounge at LAX). His artwork can currently be purchased through Bruce Lurie Gallery in Los Angeles CA., Mouche Gallery in Beverly Hills CA or Maui Wailea, HI and Rosenbaum Contemporary in Boca Raton FL along with every other major art fair in the United States.

Falling For His Proper Mistress Tessa Radley 2010-08-01 It had been forty-nine days—and nights—since Guy Jarrod last touched Avery Lancaster. Yes, the successful businessman had believed the rumors of her gold-digging ways. But she was an itch he needed to scratch. And being forced to work with her again during Aspen's Food and Wine Gala meant she was right within his reach. Once he finally had his fill, he would send her on her way...out of his life for good. But what if the rumors were false? Had he made a mistress out of the woman who should have been his wife?

Stay Now Tabitha R. Wilson 2016-08-27 For Ella Richards, love is a forbidden 4 letter word. No one knows her past and she likes it that way. She never lets herself get attached because getting attached means getting hurt and getting hurt is the last thing she wants. So when she gets whisked away to the Sky Lounge by the mysterious Kayden Black, she can't help but try to deny the feelings she has for him. Can she open up to him about her rocky past and finally let someone in or will she lose the one person who has come to mean more to her than she could have ever imagined? It's been years since Kayden has let a woman into his life, let alone his heart, and he plans on it being years before he lets another woman in again. Then he finds Ella in the club and is drawn to her. But why? What is so special about this woman? Hoping to figure it out, he takes her to a place a little more private. Can Kayden come clean about his past and accept the outcome? Will they stay together or will they fall apart?

KIM Jee-woon KIM Hyung-seok 2008-12-18 KIM Jee-woon KIM Jee-woon is both a talented genre filmmaker and one of the few cineastes in today's Korean film possessing both skillful storytelling abilities and an original visual style. KIM began his career as a stage actor, stage director, and screenwriter. His films have been hailed by critics and audiences alike for his unique styles and method of storytelling. With KIM, there is a slightly uneasy coexistence of the virtues of a commercial film director and solitary auteurism; a sense of conscience that demands that he make even entertainment films melancholy; aesthetic judgment that is stinting toward genre film coupled with a director's dissatisfaction with that situation. His films represent a kind of theory of life presented through the conventions of genre film, and the director constantly provides a gaze of compassion toward the characters suffering within his films. Korean Film Directors Created by the Korean Film Council, this series offers deep insight into key directors in Korean film, figures who are not only broadening the range of art and creativity found in Korean-produced commercial films but also gaining increasingly strong footholds in international markets. Each volume features: - critical commentary on films - extensive interview - biography - complete filmography Nurturing Britney Becca Jameson 2021-03-02 Britney I'm a stripper by night while I live plain and under the radar by day. A gal has to do whatever's necessary to make ends meet. My boss has maintained a hands-off policy for me, but now I know why. I've been sold. My innocent looks. My petite frame. My virginity. I'm a commodity. I'm on the run. I'm used to living a tough life. I've done it since I was born. When Davis takes me in, he offers protection, solace, relief. He offers a chance to experience the things I missed out on. He offers to be my Daddy Dom. I'm his little now. I've never been happier. But my boss is looking for me. He'll stop at nothing to find me. Even if I could escape that fact, how long can I find comfort in being Daddy's little girl? Davis I left the military and moved to Seattle to join my buddies at Black Blade Protection. I left behind my little. We were growing apart. We wanted different things. I spend my days and nights protecting people. Providing security. I'm not prepared to be knocked on my ass by a sprite of a woman who can't meet my gaze. She's the entire package—cute and sexy with big blue eyes and hair down to her butt. She needs my help, but it's impossible to ignore her tendencies as a little. She's vulnerable and alone. Nightmares yank her out of her sleep. She's also precious and gracious and has me wrapped around her finger. I should keep my hands to myself. She doesn't know about my world. The choice is ultimately hers, but first I have to destroy her buyer and end the threat to her life.

13th Balloon Mark Bibbins 2020-02-22 In his fourth collection, 13th Balloon, Mark Bibbins turns his candid eye to the American AIDS crisis. With quiet consideration and dark wit, Bibbins addresses the majority of his poems to Mark Crast, his friend and lover who died from AIDS at the early age of 25. Every broken line and startling linguistic turn grapples with the genre of elegy: what does it mean to experience personal loss, Bibbins seems to ask, amidst a greater societal tragedy? The answer is blurred—amongst unforeseen disease, intolerance, and the intimate consequences of mismanaged power. Perhaps the most unanswerable question arrives when Bibbins writes, "For me elegy/ is like a Ouija planchette/ something I can barely touch/ as I try to make it/ say what I want it to say." And while we are still searching for the words that might begin an answer, Bibbins helps us understand that there is endless value in continuing—through both joy and grief—to wonder.

The Velvet Lounge Gerald Majer 2005-08-24 Troubled urban neighborhoods and jazz-club havens were the backdrop of Gerald Majer's life growing up in sixties and seventies Chicago. The Velvet Lounge, an original hybrid of memoir, biography, and musical description, reflects this history and pursues a sustained meditation on jazz along with a probing exploration of race and class and how they defined the material and psychic divides of a city. With the instrument of a supple, lyrical prose style, Majer elaborates the book's themes through literary and intellectual forays as carefully constructed and as passionately articulated as a jazz master's solo. Throughout the work, issues of identity and culture, art and politics achieve a rare immediacy, as does the music itself. In portraits of Jimmy Smith, Gene Ammons, Sonny Stitt, Sun Ra, and others, Gerald Majer conveys the drama and artistry of their music as well as the personal hardships many of them endured. Vivid descriptions and telling historical anecdotes explore the music's richness through a variety of political, social, and philosophical contexts. The Velvet Lounge, named after the famous Chicago club, is also one of the few works to consider the music of such avant-garde jazz musicians as Fred Anderson, Andrew Hill, and Roscoe Mitchell. In doing so, Majer builds a bridge from the traditionalist view of jazz to the world of contemporary innovators, casts a new light on the music and its makers, and traces connections between jazz art and postmodernist thought. Present throughout Majer's spirited encounters with the worlds of jazz is Majer himself. We hear and appreciate the music through his individual sensibilities and experiences. Majer recounts growing up in racially divided Chicago—his trips to the famed Maxwell Street market, his wanderings among its legendary jazz clubs, his riding the El, and his working in a jukebox factory. We witness his awakening to the music at a crossroads of the intimately personal and the intellectually provocative. Expecting the Rancher's Heir Kathie DeNosky 2010-09-01 Melissa Jarrod treasured her secret no-strings affair with rich rancher Shane McDermott. Then a pregnancy test rocked the Aspen heiress's world. An out-of-wedlock baby would spook conservative investors in her family's luxury resort business just as she and her siblings were settling in to run Jarrod Ridge. But Shane was a man of honor—curbing his playboy ways and proposing came naturally. Make no mistake, the bride was beautiful, but for Shane this was strictly a marriage of convenience. Melissa, on the other hand, wouldn't settle for anything less than love—for her and her child.

The Summer of My Life Paul Howe 2023-05-22 It was a picture-perfect night out—the moon was full, and a warm tropical breeze was gently rustling the palm trees. As we were walking across the parking lot of the Dusit Thani, I felt an extremely overwhelming urge to kiss her, as she looked gorgeous and her perfume smelled heavenly. I gathered every ounce of my courage and gently grabbed her arm and pulled her into me and kissed her. She didn't seem to resist, and we kissed for several moments, and it felt amazing. After we broke our embrace, she poised herself, as English people are very proper, and said, "What was that all about?" I was totally embarrassed and began apologizing profusely, saying, "I am so sorry. I apologize. Please forgive me, I should have asked—" when she suddenly grabbed my arm and began kissing me passionately. To hold her in my arms knowing she was the one that wanted to kiss this time had me enthralled as we stood in the middle of the parking lot kissing in the warm, tropical, moonlit night. It was truly magical, an evening I will never forget, a night of all nights. As we slowly released each other from our second embrace, she said, "I have never been kissed like that." I was stunned she said that, but I felt the very same way; it sent waves of ecstasy throughout my entire body. I never felt like that before, and it seemed ultramagnetic and so erotically romantic in the moonlight, holding her in my arms and with her tongue and lips passionately kissing me. It was the night of all nights in the summer of my life.

Taken on the "A" Train Nicola Nichols 2019-12-28 Zelda is a hotwife riding on the opening ride of the "A" Train, a renovated luxury train running overnight from Boston to Chicago. Husband Hank is in the sky lounge trying to network for business which leaves her free to find a hot party. When she meets a hot guy, the problem is finding a place to party.
He gets a pass that lets them into a private car where a serious party is going on. She throws herself into the sensual, anonymous fun, wanting to be the main attraction. The men and women are happy to oblige her, and as the train rocks steadily through the countryside she's filled and drilled by multiple partners in every way imaginable. It's all great fun, but what happens in Chicago, when it all ends? ~~~~~ PG Excerpt ~~~~~ It was supposed to be quite the thing. If you believed the news, it would be one of the not-to-be-missed social events of the year. And it was rather retro, too. I liked that. All of it. I needed a party of some kind ? something different. It was the relaunch of the ?A? train, its inaugural run from on the route from Boston?s Back Bay Station bound for Chicago. It had been some years since it last ran and had undergone a major renovation in an attempt to regain its splendor. Once upon a time, the ?A? train had been a posh way for the ultra-rich to travel between Beantown and what was a financial center. Planes and car travel had pre-empted it and it had fallen into disuse. Now someone had the idea of bringing it back, making rail travel glamorous again. Anyway, it was all over the news about how they'd tracked down the original posh railroad cars and had brought them back to their original glory. Times had changed, and with air travel becoming utilitarian, I guess the idea was to make this an upmarket run that was an attraction itself. Luxury travel, the way a cruise ship is supposed to be. The train itself is the destination, is what the flyer Hank had handed me said. My husband had bought us tickets and then felt he had to sell it to me. It's going to be a big party of the kind of people you like, he told me. They threw all sorts of things at it. Take the 'A' Train was the refrain you heard on the ads that seemed to run continuously on television. While a big party, something different like that can be fun, sometimes they try too hard to make them interesting. It can sound desperate. You've been looking for something different. That's what my husband said. And it was true. He knows I like parties; he also knew that I was getting bored with most of the regular ones in the city. They'd become little more than the same people trying to find clever ways to not be bored. Hank had his own reasons for wanting to go. He's a deal maker and figured this would be a venue that gave him access to different people. It would give him a chance to do business to schmooze with the rich and famous. Besides, it involved trains. Hank had always loved trains. He had posters of trains in his office. We'll take the 'A' Train, just like in the Duke Ellington song, he said. That was what they played in the commercials for it? the Duke's old arrangement. It's a Bill Strayhorn song, I said. The Duke played it, but Billy wrote it. Whatever. Hank never appreciated being corrected. You got us a sleeper? He shook his head. They don't have any on the first run, even though it's an overnight trip. It will be nonstop partying. There will be food and drinks; in fact, there will be an open bar. At the price they are charging? I imagine it will be crowded and probably quite insane. He smiled. You know it will be. I expect a lot of people will dress in period costumes. Crowded and quite insane meant different things to the two of us. For him it meant fantastic networking opportunities; for me, it meant diving into the insanity of a party atmosphere. In this case, anonymous partying, which can get rather wild and fun.

They Don't Kill You Because They're Hungry, They Kill You Because They're Full Mark Bibbins 2016-08-01 Honored as a "Best Poetry Book of the Year" by Publishers Weekly "The book's a little crazy, packed with air quotes and brackets, jokes and condemnations, forms that explode across the page. Crazy enough, it's also packed with truth."—NPR "The voice of this third book from Bibbins is marked and numbed by the onslaught of American media and politics that saturate the Internet, television, radio, and smartphone: 'the way things are going, children/ will have to upgrade to more amusing.' Much like advertisements or news stories vying for viewer's attention, the book intentionally overwhelms, eschewing sections; the author instead differentiates the poems by repetition, creating a sort of echo chamber, similar to the way viral information cycles through social media platforms."—Publishers Weekly, starred review "[A] hilarious send-up of contemporary values and an alarm bell of sorts, directing attention to all that is so sinister in our civilization."—American Poets "Whip-smart and wickedly funny, They Don't Kill You is Bibbins's most authoritative and self-possessed collection to date."—Boston Review The poems in Mark Bibbins's breakthrough third book are formally innovative and socially alert. Roving across the weird human landscape of modern politics, media-exacerbated absurdity, and questionable social conventions, this collection counters dread with wit, chaos with clarity, and reminds us that suffering is "small//compared to what?" Mark Bibbins teaches in the graduate writing programs at The New School and Columbia University, and edits the poetry section of The Awl. He lives in New York City.
